

Developments in Oils for Commercial Frying

J Barry Rossell

^a 71 Newstead Road, Bournemouth, Dorset, BH6 3HL, and formerly of Leatherhead Food Research Association (LFRA), Randalls Road, Leatherhead, Surrey, KT22 7RY United Kingdom. E-mail: <Barryrossell@aol.com>

Abstract

Commercial frying oils are used in the production of a wide variety of foods. As the foods are often stored before sale, the quality of the frying oil is very important. The development of improved frying oils must therefore satisfy a number of different requirements. These are reviewed together with several new approaches to the production of these specialised oils